According to leading analysts in the country, it seems that the jobless rates in the country will soar to a new height, whereby more people in the country will be unemployed in the near future.

Also, sources from the Labor Department have reported that the unemployment figure for January reached an all-time high of 800,000, and this particular number is about to be raised to a couple of notch higher in the foreseeable future.

I believe that Obama should speed up his efforts in creating more jobs in the country, else the entire nation will collapse and a major catastrophic economic disaster might take place in the country.

Do you think that our financial system will collapse in the near future?
